FRIDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 22, 1918.

A loaf of bread today looks like the buns mother used to bake.

A little more snow to remind us that the month is February and that our hopes of Spring were a little premature.

That one little peek of Mother Earth that we had was sufficient to make many a man sit down and order his supply of seeds.

Every woman in town should attend the cooking and baking demonstration at the High School tomorrow afternoon. Let every woman who is going to do something toward taking another with her.

It certainly is a pleasure to print such letters as are written by our townsman, Dr. W. Scott Piper. His letter is quite lengthy and must be printed in serial form. Watch for the closing chapters tomorrow.

This is the last day of the big Salvation Army drive in Clearfield. Captain Parkins advises that Clearfield has done very well for this noble institution and that over eight hundred dollars has been raised. The goal set was $1000 and any who have not yet contributed should mail their check to J. B. McPherson, Treasurer of the Fund, this evening.

Many people seem to have gotten the impression that the art classes being organized here by Professor Burfoot are for the school pupils. While the school pupils are admitted to the classes Professor Burfoot is qualified by ability and experience to tutor adults in the art of painting and lovers of the art have a wonderful chance to study with him here. Professor Burfoot will be at the High School tomorrow morning to organize classes.

ORIGIN OF THIS HOLIDAY

It was not long after Washington's death that the nation set apart his birthday as a day for national observance. The following proclamation by John Adams, President of the United States, is quite appropriate for today and through the courtesy of J. Frank Snyder we are enabled to reproduce it from a book in his possession:

A PROCLAMATION

By The President of the United States of America
Whereas the Congress of the United States have this day resolved, "that it be recommended to the people of the United States, to assemble on the twenty-second day of February next, in such numbers and manner as may be convenient, publicly to testify their grief for the death of General George Washington, by suitable eulogies, orations and discourses or by public prayers;" and "That the President be requested to issue a proclamation for the purpose of carrying the foregoing resolution into effect." Now, therefore, I, John Adams, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim the same accordingly.
Given under my hand and seal of the United States of America, at Philadelphia, the sixth day of January, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and of the independence of the said states the twenty-fourth.

JOHN ADAMS.

By The President,
Timothy Pickering, Secretary of State.

FACTS ABOUT GEORGE WASHINGTON

He was six feet two inches tall. He had brown hair, which became thin and gray. He had smallpox when a boy while visiting the Barbadoes. Washington had a special fondness for sorrel horses. He rode a fine one at the battle of Trenton. He sat for hours without speaking aloud, but had a habit of moving his lips while engaged in serious thought. He received an appointment to go in the navy when fourteen years of age, but his mother objected, and so it was given up. "He never knelt in church," said Bishop White, "but stood during the devotional part of the service. Mrs. Washington knelt."

His nephew, who lived for years with the Washingtons, said he was always up before sunrise. He knelt in private prayer, both morning and evening. Washington died at the beginning of the last hour of the day, of the last day of the week, of the last month of the year, of the last year of the century.

For some reason, which his family never knew, Washington stopped taking communion years before he died. Mrs. Washington invariably remained for that service.

All the States took official action upon Washington's farewell address, and several States did the unusual thing of having it bound as a part of their laws.

When Lafayette and Rochambeau wrote to Washington, when they did frequently, they employed the English language, although Rochambeau wrote in French and had his letters translated before mailing.

Faithful close neighbors as they were Washington and Jefferson never saw each other after Washington retired from the presidency, nearly three years before his death. They were not on friendly terms at that period.

John Adams, while President, in Philadelphia, refused to sanction the celebration of Washington's birthday on the ground, as he afterward said, that it was a slight upon the highest official of the land to honor thus a private citizen.

Washington's birthday anniversary became a general holiday by common consent. The observance had its origin in a convivial supper in a New York tavern in 1783, when a company met to listen to an original ode and drink innumerable toasts. The next year the anniversary was kept by the same company and in the same manner and before long the observance began to spread. Regarded at first as a purely party custom, it broadened beyond official and military circles to take in all Americans. Before Washington's death the custom of celebrating his birthday anniversary had become quite general in all the States.

True Economy In Shoes--- Lies In The Best

There's no true saving in buying a cheap, unknown shoe for "a dollar less". Patronize a dealer of reliability, of integrity, and buy well-known shoes at the fair prices when you'll be asked to pay.

Responsible shoe merchants have not advanced their prices except in proportion to actual increases in the cost of manufacture. The best shoes have not advanced greatly in price, so now, more than ever, the only true economy lies in buying the best.

A PHYSICIAN'S TREATMENT FOR CATARRH, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS

Simply obtain a small jar of Forkola Jelly—all good druggists have it—and allow about one-quarter of a teaspoonful to slowly melt in your mouth. In a few minutes a gentle glow will be felt and all that hard, choking, clogging matter will be easily coughed up and expelled. A short but steady treatment for a week or 10 days will rid you of disgusting catarrh forever. Catarrh is often caused by catarrh and sufferers are advised to insert a small piece of Forkola Jelly on a piece of absorbent cotton into the ear. Do this at bedtime, and see how a few nights' treatment will relieve you. There's nothing that will so quickly give relief to catarrh sufferers as Forkola Jelly. Every druggist in this country guarantees it on the money back is dissatisfied plan.

FEELS FINE, SAYS MRS. JOHN HOGAN

She Now Testifies That Tanlac Has Improved Her in Every Way

"Tanlac has made me feel fine," declared Mrs. John Hogan, of Bridgeport, Pa.

"I learned of it through my son, who brought me the medicine about a week ago, and I began taking it. 'Owing to a bad, weak stomach, I have eaten very little for years, and, naturally, my strength and vitality became very much lowered. Food seldom agreed with me, even the lightest kinds causing distress after eating. I had spells of bloating, shortness of breath, palpitation, dizziness and headaches. Month and months of such misery are sure to undermine the health of any woman. I finally grew very nervous and could not rest well at night."

"I am now feeling the best I have in years. Tanlac relieved me immediately. The second day my appetite increased. I really was hungry and the grandest thing of all is that eating did not hurt me. Tanlac strengthened my digestion and I do not have bloating or shortness of breath. The palpitation, headaches and dizziness have also gone."

"Tanlac has made a new woman of me. I feel better every way. My nerves are better. I have plenty of strength and never have a bit of trouble sleeping. Tanlac is different from all other medicines. It is remarkable."

Tanlac the celebrated Master Medicine is now sold here by Woodward & McPherson.

RHEUMATISM SO BAD CONFINED TO HER BED
Tried Remedy After Remedy And Only After Almost Giving Up Hope Heard of Acid Iron Mineral

Third Day Product of Great Ore Bed Began Showing Results
Few readers are troubled with rheumatism so badly that they are confined to bed, but many a man is only half husband and many a woman is only half wife because rheumatism keeps them in a fret and groan all day long. Rubbing won't do any permanent good and sice the discovery of a medicine iron ore bed buried away for centuries down in Mississippi, less the way now to quick relief if thousands of tests are to be trusted. Where is the man or woman who shouldn't use it. Not like radium, which is beyond the reach of all but the rich, this natural product highly concentrated compound may be as cheap as a twelve ounce bottle secured at most any drug store. Read what one user says:
"I heard of Acid Iron Mineral being a wonderful rheumatism cure and took it, and it did me so much good so quickly I wish I could shout its praises from the house tops," declares Mrs. S. H. Fetteroy, of West Point, Va.
"I suffered from rheumatism in various forms for more than two years and would be confined to my bed for weeks at a time and suffered untold torture and agony. I tried remedy after remedy with but little or no result and was almost in despair when I heard of a bottle and before the first bottle was gone I felt like another person. It began relieving me by leaps and bounds after the third day and I steadily kept on improving until now I can't say enough praise of it and wish every rheumatic sufferer would take it."
Note—Up until the discovery of the ore from which Acid Iron Mineral is made, tinctures and extracts of iron were used but they injured the teeth and caused all sorts of complications. Now this medicinal preparation is available and harmless yet powerful and may be taken at home there isn't a man or woman living who may be suffering with rheumatism who cannot wisely start taking Acid Iron Mineral. Local druggists have it.

GOING INTO THE LINE

A Vivid Description of a Journey From The Rear Lines To Face The Hun

By Dr. W. Scott Piper, of Clearfield.
Now "Over There"

The following letter or article was received by the Clearfield High school and it is with great pleasure that we present it to the readers of The Progress throughout the county.

We are in camp about sixteen miles from the line. This forms one of the permanent rest camps for troops as they are relieved after doing their bit in the front. Here they re-form their ranks, fill in with men sent up from the base, drill early and late, practice stunts for their next who go over their kits and equipment pack their iron rations, go on fatigue duty, which, true to its name, certainly does fatigue. But it is all welcome and looked upon as a "rest period" after the life in the line.

About 4 p. m. the order is posted, "Break camp November —, troops fall in at 6.45 a. m., move off at 6.50 a. m." My servant soon appears, salutes, "What kit sir?"

"My leather case, rubber storm sheet, one blanket, toilet articles and great coat. Not another thing lad. See that they are on the medical cart at 6.30 a. m. and call me in time for 5.30 sick parade."

After dinner in the officers' mess there is a jolly time, horse play and fun until 11 o'clock. Who knows what the morrow will bring forth, tonight we will make merry for life is sweet. Finally it is bed with jolly "cheerios".

How comfortable these cots feel when one thinks of the stretched chicken wire or bare ground that will form our couch tomorrow night. My dreams are of home and family. What a jolly time we are having. Yes, we are in the car and the old familiar places are rolling past and Billie is coaxing to run the car. No! no! don't pull daddy's arm. The car is skidding; let get let get—what! I am sitting bolt upright and my servant tugging at my arm—

"It is 4.30 sir, here is your tea, sir."

In ten minutes I am shaved and in my bath, canvas collapsible tub, but welcome nevertheless. Breakfast is eaten hurriedly, for sick parade will be heavy.

Down the row of huts I go for what proved to be the last time. My medical orderly meets me at the door of the hospital hut. "Forty sick sir."

They are soon filing in and saluting. "What is the trouble lad?"

"A bad tooth, sir."

"Stand aside, I will pull it shortly. Your trouble?"

"A boil, sir."

"Hand me the scalpel sergeant," etc.

After sick parade I make out the reports and arrange for a couple transfers to the Field Ambulance. By the time I am through the troops have formed and marched off. I hurry to the mess but where my groom stands holding my horse, mount and go cantering off, for I know my batman will have my excess kit transferred to the transport lines for storage and the few articles I need on the medical cart.

I pass over a short piece of road our boys have made the last week. First they layed brush, then a covering of chalk which they crushed down smooth. I am soon on the main highway, which is fine macadam kept in perfect condition in spite of the heavy traffic. To my right are a few collapsed trenches which were built and labeled by the French when they were holding this area. The Germans never reached here but the defenses were made when there was still danger of a break through, but now they have been allowed to fall in and become partially obliterated.

To the left is camp after camp. Here is one of those admirable Y. Emma huts. It is run by the Canadians and what a power for good it is.

Street and little shops line the way, filled with knick knacks to tempt the Tommies.

To my left is a large rambling building with the red cross at the gate. My old ambulance, God bless every one connected with it, is located here.

All these buildings I am now passing are used as billets for staff of officers and troops and here is a divisional canteen.

I am now passing out of the town. Yes, there on the other slope is a long moving line, our boys are gallily moving up to relieve their comrades and go through another period of facing the Hun.

To the right is a sort of a railway yard, possibly a dozen engines are waiting there. Ridiculously small they are in comparison with our massive locomotives, but efficient and all ways on the job.

An I trot up to the rear of the line the most doleful thing I ever heard strikes my ear. The whole regiment is singing "A long, long trail a-winding," the most impressive thing imaginable. It is doleful in the extreme and almost brings the tears to your eyes just to hear the tune. The Tommie takes great delight in it but I would rather hear it most any time other than when I am marching into the line.

They are marching in companies with the proper distance between. The colonel and the major are both riding in the rear and I join them.

The men are all equipped for the line, heavy packs on their back and rifles on their shoulders, short sword at their sides which fits on their rifle to form the bayonet. Intrenching tools also at their side.

We turn to the left and strike a short piece of cobble road, then again on macadam. Now again we have a good view of the old monastery, how quaint and interesting it looks. Here is some fine farming country but the chalk shows through on the hill sides. Now we are passing some more camps.

Here is one of the wonderful British road making machines. Big steam propelled rollers patching, repaving and making macadam road with absolutely no blocking of traffic. These road making machines are to be found right up in the midst of heavy gun fire, making the roads and preparing the way for the troops and transports. Do not think the engineering regiments have nothing to do. They are a very necessary and very wonderful part of the army organization.

Now we are passing the narrow gauge railway that goes clear to the front. A steam engine is pulling that train of cars. The last time we were in the line we went up on flat cars like those. As soon as they reach the area of gun fire the steam engines will be replaced by gasoline engines, which are not so easily observed by the enemy.

"Halt, fall out" is given. On go the packs and the lads sprawl over the banks, cigarettes are lit and everyone relaxes. We all get off our horses and throw the reins to our servants who are by our sides by this time. Fifty minutes march, ten minute rest is the hourly schedule.

Our march now carries us through a considerable area of splendid farming land with busy women and old men, also some lads, tilling the soil, bringing in belated crops and preparing for next years sowing.

High in the air four airplanes are dipping and soaring. There is going to be an air battle. Near and nearer they swoop, wheel and turn. No, they are all British planes playing tag in the air and practicing tactics. See that one soaring with two others following in close pursuit and the fourth making off to be in position for a sudden attack on the flank. A sudden dip the leading machine turns completely over, swoops down head first in front of the ascending machines and with a sudden turn comes directly up over the tail of one of them, a favorite position to get in a death blow. The attacked machine playing up to the game, flops over and over, suddenly rights itself and they all go sailing easily away. But their little side show bodes not good for the Hun when they meet them.

See that row of sticks on the horizon? Yes, they used to be trees, that line marks the farthest advance the Huns made in this area. Oh! here we see real trenches, even though they are collapsed and fallen into decay. This was the reserve line of the French, a little farther on is the s.p.

On account of this being a short month the boys will not collect for The Progress until next Friday instead of today as usual. Please prepare to pay the boys when they call next Friday evening or Saturday morning.

port line and here is the first line, all of them seamed and furrowed and connected by zig zag communication trenches, here in front of the first line is the rusted and broken fragments of the inevitable barb wire entanglements. See that pile of bricks and mortar over there? At one time that was a happy French home with good buildings, but it happened to be in no man's land. Poor, innocent people, I wonder what their fate was. Let us hope they got away even though their home is left in ruins. What is this on the right? Quite a group of small wooden crosses with the ribbon and wreath on them that marks the French soldiers grave. See that poor, old woman sitting with her hands folded by the one small cross. She is too far away for me to see her face but she has found the last resting place of a loved one who died gloriously for sunny France. What is this roughened, moundy, irregular area we are approaching? That, my friend was a city of more than ten thousand inhabitants. Impossible! But no, it was even so, now it is nothing but bricks, and mounds. See that pile of broken machinery? At one time that was some form of a manufacturing plant. There lies a piece of a statue, undoubtedly a French church was located here. All these other mounds and piles of debris were happy homes and filled with happy families and laughing children. Oh, the horrors of war and the beastliness of the aggressor! Here to the left are a row of huts and a few cellars bridged over with elephant iron. This is our horse transport line, here our reserve equipment will be stored. Here to one side are a couple good huts and several improved shelters with a red cross flying—another headquarters for a field ambulance. Now we are passing through horribly mutilated ground, trenches and heavy bulky barb wire and cunningly zigzagged tripping wires here the wily Hun hoped to stop the advance of the splendid French.

See these little crosses, here, there and everywhere even perched precariously in the bank by the wayside. They mark the resting place of some noble French lads who from the exigencies of the occasion had to be buried where they fell. Now we are passing an ammunition dump. Thousands upon thousands of crates and boxes and huge quantities of shells of every size, also trench mortars or minnies and all the other accessories of the engines of war. These heavy nettles of green and varicolored strips that are stretched over the huge mounds of explosives is one of the forms of camouflage which makes it difficult for the enemy aeroplanes to distinguish this from surrounding land, that frightful daubing and smearing of those huts and tents to our right is done for the same purpose, also dummy guns are made with tree trunks and dummy ammunition dumps and camps to draw the fire of the enemy artillery as they are spotted by those far seeing eyes of the army—the aeroplane. If one side in this conflict could sweep the opposing planes from the air the army would be blinded and its power decreased a hundred fold. We are now passing through the ruins of another village. This one was not quite so directly in the line of fire as the last city we passed through, for there are some walls remaining or pieces of walls possibly three or four feet high. See that piece of a baby's crib sticking through the pile of rubbish. Let us hope the babe was not in it when the crash came. There is a boot sticking stiffly in the air, sole upward in the debris of that cellar. I would not care to pull that boot, the result might be quite disconcerting. On, this awful desolation! I can not keep my mind from dwelling on the thought—what if beautiful little Clearfield should stand in the path of the devastation of war, what if the German guns were pounding the last vestige of a building from our own dear city, the war would then be brought home to us, dear friends. Oh the horror and frightfulness of it all! Shall we allow the aggressor to finally go back with no indemnities?

STANDARDIZATION OF AIRCRAFT IS NOT TO STIFLE INVENTIVE GENIUS

It has frequently been claimed, in the press and in certain scientific quarters, that the principle of standardization to which the Government departments are committed in the design and manufacture of airplane engines and parts, has a serious tendency to discourage and stifle inventive initiative throughout the country. It is stated that these officials, once they have decided on a standard design, continue along that line without reference to the invention and suggestions offered from the outside by patriotic societies.

In view of this feeling, which is not alone confined to enthusiastic inventors who have had their schemes or overnight aerial domination refused by the government a statement is given relative to the policy of the Aircraft Board in this matter.

In no department of the Government's war preparations is more money spent for the encouragement of new designs and in the development of inventions which give promise of definite results. To anyone who has ever encountered the inventive genius of this country when thoroughly aroused to action, manifesting itself in thousands of schemes which pour in from all sections of the United States, ranging in practicability from the suggesting a formation flight over Germany with huge magnets to draw up in the air and fly away with the entire steel supply of the central powers, to those suggestions whose value and adaptability are at once patent, it will be seen that even in the most cursory consideration of all these ideas submitted there is a tremendous task.

For the conscientious performance of this task the following three bodies of scientists pass on inventions in their respective lines:

1. The National Research Council, made up of engineers and scientists, both of the War and Navy Departments and members of the great engineering societies of the country. This body deals with scientific development generally as related to the military and naval forces.

2. The Naval Consulting Board, under the chairmanship of Thomas A. Edison, and composed of two representatives, each chosen by vote from 11 national engineering and scientific organizations of the United States. This body, created originally to deal with inventions and developments in connection with the Navy, has, since the outbreak of the war, extended its services as an invention bureau connected with the Council of National Defense.

3. The National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, created by Congress, appointed by the President, and reporting directly to him in all matters of aircraft development. It is to this body that all questions relating to inventions in connection with aircraft are first referred. The personnel of the committee is as follows:

Chairman, William F. Durand, Ph. D.; secretary, S. W. Stratton, Sc. D.; Joseph S. Ames, Ph. D.; Lieut. Col. V. E. Clark, U. S. A.; John F. Hasler, C. E.; Charles F. Marvin, M. E.; Hon. Byron R. Newton; Michael L. Pupin, Ph. D.; Maj. Gen. George O. Squier, U. S. A.; Rear Admiral David W. Taylor, U. S. N.; Lieut. Commander J. H. Towers, U. S. N.; Charles D. Walcott, C. E.

Here an invention is analyzed, experiments are conducted at the Bureau of Standards or elsewhere, and, if a favorable decision is reached, recommendations are made to the Aircraft Board that a full working-sized model be constructed. After such has been done under the direction of the board it is turned over to the Joint Technical Committee of the War and Navy Departments for trial and for decision as to whether or not the invention is of such military value as to warrant its being put into quantity production for the purpose of training or of war.

TO GET THEIR JUST DESERTS

Washington, Feb. 22—Immediate drafting into service of all slackers under arrest will be begun under a plan being prepared by the Justice department it was officially stated today. County jails in many part of the country it was stated are being crowded with the shirkers and their immediate removal is imperative.

LAMB AND MUTTON CAN BE USED ON MEATLESS DAYS

Washington, Feb. 22—Lamb and mutton may be eaten on meatless days it was officially announced. The food administration today indicated clearly that there is no chance now for lifting of the ban on beef and pork, however. Since November 1, the food administration declares American beef exportation to the Allies has amounted to less than 5 per cent. of all the animals slaughtered.

The per capita consumption of beef and pork must be left off the menu on meatless days indefinitely it is indicated. Rations in Europe, the food administration explains, being reduced to approximately 1 pound of meat per capita in a week. It is less than 30 per cent. of the American consumption. Europe's food supply today is "so low as to tend to diminish the morale and resistance of the Allies," Hoover declared. The situation in mutton and lamb is different, he said, and in those states in which this western product is available lamb and mutton may be used on meatless days for a time.

ANOTHER CHAMPION PUGILIST TAKES THE FINAL COUNT

New York, Feb. 22—Terry McGovern, former featherweight world champion boxer died today at the Kings' county hospital at Brooklyn. McGovern, known to ring followers as "Terrible Terry" McGovern, was born in Johnstown, Pa., 35 years ago. He made his home, however in Brooklyn and was referred to as Terry McGovern from Brooklyn.

He became ill last December when on a visit to Camp Upton, one of the nearby army cantonments, and was removed to the hospital where he rallied and seemed better. Thursday night he was again taken ill and was sent to the Kings' county hospital, where he became unconscious last night and died without regaining consciousness. Mrs. McGovern was at his bedside.

McGovern lost his featherweight championship to Young Corbett, at Hartford, Conn., mmen to the surprise of friends and followers of the ring who believed McGovern unbeatable. Corbett again knocked out McGovern some time later and McGovern's star immediately began to decline.

ROMANIA MAY MAKE PEACE

Amsterdam, Feb. 22—Peace negotiations between Rumania and the Central Powers will be started to morrow according to reports received here today. AUSTRALIANS TAKE THE CITY OF JERICO

General Allenby Reports Success of Mounted Troops in Land Held By The Turks

OLD BIBLE HISTORY RECALLED

London, Feb. 22—Australian mounted troops entered Jericho at 8:20 this morning establishing themselves on a line between Jericho and Wagiampa, an official statement from General Allenby reported today.

The London war office announced yesterday that General Allenby's forces were within four miles of Jericho on Wednesday.

The Israelites captured Jericho from the Canaanites according to the Old Testament by marching around the city with the Ark of the Lord once a day for six days and on the seventh day encircled the city seven times. The priests blew on their trumpets when the last encircling march had been made and the Israelites shouted in unison and the walls of the city fell in ruin.

JUDGE BELL TALKS TO PROBLEM CLUB

A regular meeting of the Modern Problems Club was held in the history room of the High School building, Tuesday evening; the Hon. Judge Bell was the speaker of the evening.

Judge Bell is one of the High School's best friends and when the club asked him to talk to them he kindly consented to do so.

The present war we were told will change conditions in this country; railroads will not be controlled by the government but they will have power to see that the roads are not congested on account of not having trains enough to run one road and on another road have trains in the sheds, not being used. Nor will one section of the country have one of the necessities of life while another section be suffering from the lack of that. Anything that involves the power of the government will be regulated. The idea is to give the consumer next place to the producer.

"The question 'What am I going to do?' not only materially but the greatest thing is to make of ourselves men and women that will be a credit to the community in which we live."

One of the greatest things Mr. Bell told us was to train ourselves to be a mixer. After the war social conditions will be changed and the "sets" fewer "sets". We must learn to do our work well, and if necessary be able to do fifteen minutes work in ten and do it well, but not to do the work we are made and fitted to do.

We wish to thank Judge Bell again for his kindness and wish he would come back again.

Washington, Feb. 22—A determined effort to curtail President Wilson's power to set aside laws which would hamper the free control of the railroads under federal management was defeated in the Senate today. By a vote of 46 to 25 the Senate rejected Hitchcock's amendment to the railroad bill providing that the President must have congressional authority before putting orders into effect regarding the railroad control.

An eminent naturalist, who made a careful study of the manner in which lighthouses cause the death of birds, has found that in most instances the bird is not killed by the impact of flashing against the lighthouse window. The cause of death is exhaustion from flying round and round the light.

Out of His Range

A young man stopped into a sporting goods store recently, related the Indianapolis News, and asked to see some guns. His remarks indicated that he was a sportsman of a decidedly amateurish sort. The obliging salesman brought forth all manner and varieties of weapons, from a .22-caliber rifle to the latest model "pump" gun, but nothing brought forth any response of satisfaction into the young fellow's face. Finally the salesman landed him a high-powered rifle, used for big game, with the remark, "This beautiful little gun, sir, is just what you want, I believe. It kills at 3000 yards." The young man shook his head more in doubt than ever. "No," he said, "I am afraid I couldn't shoot at all. You see, I have to go."

Hard Rubbing is Wasteful

It does more to ruin clothes on washday than daily wear all week.

FEELS FINE, SAYS MRS. JOHN HOGAN

She Now Testifies That Tanlac Has Improved Her in Every Way

"Tanlac has made me feel fine," declared Mrs. John Hogan, of Bridgeport, Pa.

"I learned of it through my son, who brought me the medicine about a week ago, and I began taking it. 'Owing to a bad, weak stomach, I have eaten very little for years, and, naturally, my strength and vitality became very much lowered. Food seldom agreed with me, even the lightest kinds causing distress after eating. I had spells of bloating, shortness of breath, palpitation, dizziness and headaches. Month and months of such misery are sure to undermine the health of any woman. I finally grew very nervous and could not rest well at night."

"I am now feeling the best I have in years. Tanlac relieved me immediately. The second day my appetite increased. I really was hungry and the grandest thing of all is that eating did not hurt me. Tanlac strengthened my digestion and I do not have bloating or shortness of breath. The palpitation, headaches and dizziness have also gone."

"Tanlac has made a new woman of me. I feel better every way. My nerves are better. I have plenty of strength and never have a bit of trouble sleeping. Tanlac is different from all other medicines. It is remarkable."

Tanlac the celebrated Master Medicine is now sold here by Woodward & McPherson.

RHEUMATISM SO BAD CONFINED TO HER BED

Third Day Product of Great Ore Bed Began Showing Results

Few readers are troubled with rheumatism so badly that they are confined to bed, but many a man is only half husband and many a woman is only half wife because rheumatism keeps them in a fret and groan all day long. Rubbing won't do any permanent good and sice the discovery of a medicine iron ore bed buried away for centuries down in Mississippi, less the way now to quick relief if thousands of tests are to be trusted. Where is the man or woman who shouldn't use it. Not like radium, which is beyond the reach of all but the rich, this natural product highly concentrated compound may be as cheap as a twelve ounce bottle secured at most any drug store. Read what one user says:

"I heard of Acid Iron Mineral being a wonderful rheumatism cure and took it, and it did me so much good so quickly I wish I could shout its praises from the house tops," declares Mrs. S. H. Fetteroy, of West Point, Va.

"I suffered from rheumatism in various forms for more than two years and would be confined to my bed for weeks at a time and suffered untold torture and agony. I tried remedy after remedy with but little or no result and was almost in despair when I heard of a bottle and before the first bottle was gone I felt like another person. It began relieving me by leaps and bounds after the third day and I steadily kept on improving until now I can't say enough praise of it and wish every rheumatic sufferer would take it."

Note—Up until the discovery of the ore from which Acid Iron Mineral is made, tinctures and extracts of iron were used but they injured the teeth and caused all sorts of complications. Now this medicinal preparation is available and harmless yet powerful and may be taken at home there isn't a man or woman living who may be suffering with rheumatism who cannot wisely start taking Acid Iron Mineral. Local druggists have it.
